

Announcing The Journal of Emergency Medicine Humanities Section Writing Contest

The Journal of Emergency Medicine (JEM) wishes to thank all our readers worldwide for your infinite professionalism and dedication to emergency care in response to the current pandemic. This was a call to action and emergency physicians truly rose to the occasion. Please share with us your stories, your thoughts, your concerns, your aspirations, what you have learned or what you hope we all can learn from your experiences, personal or professional, in the context of the current COVID-19 crisis. Submissions can be in any format, prose, poems, etc., and please no more than a couple of pages in length. Winners will be featured as lead articles in upcoming issues of JEM.

Please submit your creative works to the Humanities in Medicine Section of JEM at
